

A big task for this week

Yesterday a team headed by Chris Welch and Doris Manco started working on Diospi Suyana's aerial tower in Poltoca. Two staff from the company Intellect - who will support the team - landed at Andahuaylas' small airport. The goal is crystal clear. By this Friday the satellite connection should work and the aerials and the transmitters be up and running.

Then 0.1mio more Peruvians will be able to receive Diospi Suyana's radio programme. Every hour we wait with bated breath for further news from the hill above the big city of Andahuaylas.

And they are off. Will Diospi Suyana's radio programme be broadcast from here by the end of the week!?
