

In April Andreas Hanigk and Andreas Rasig had disassembled the dentist's chair in Pforzheim into a hundred pieces. Today the two worked for five hours in the basement of the Schenck Co. in Darmstadt to put the puzzle back together again.

They worked hard in tropical temperatures without advertising the fact. We think it is exemplary and should be on the front page of every newspaper.